NovaBACKUP Server is a professional-grade piece of software that allows users to keep their files secure by creating backups and avoiding data loss in the event of disaster or computer failure. Use backup and restore wizards The application comes with a series of integrated wizards that allow users to backup their data or restore files intuitively. Moreover, the program includes a scheduler, enabling users to set up tasks that they want to be performed when the computer is idle. The included wizards represent the simplest way to backup or restore files, but users can also perform the activity manually. Thus, they can select the exact files and folders they want to be saved, along with the destination of the backup file. Schedule multiple operations The program comes with a powerful scheduler, providing users with the possibility to define multiple tasks to be performed at desired times. They can define both back-ups and restore operations, and can set the program to repeat them at desired intervals. Users can keep track of the scheduled and active operations by heading to the Status tab. The tool also logs all of the completed tasks and allows users to view a list of logs directly on its main window. Save files locally or in the cloud The program includes support for creating both local and remote backups. Thus, users can save their files to a different partition on the same hard disk or a new drive inside the same computer or can create the backup on a network location. With the help of this application, users can also save their files to an online destination. For that, however, they need to provide server login credentials so that the tool can automatically connect to it. System admins can use the tool to backup files on multiple computers on the same network. A fast and reliable backup program In conclusion, NovaBACKUP Server is a robust backup and restore tool, offering users the possibility to save their files locally or on a network destination and also providing them with the option to schedule backup tasks. A man was killed when a dog he was walking turned on him in a Washington, D.C. suburb, police said. D.C. police said 26-year-old William Stepp was walking two dogs when two pit bulls from his home in the 2000 block of 72nd Avenue NW attacked at about 9 a.m. Thursday. He suffered "life threatening" injuries, police said. Stepp was transported to a hospital where he later died, police said. Police said the dogs' owners were walking them, and neighbors who witnessed the attack said the dogs had "never displayed aggressive behavior before." Stepp's death is the city's fourth dog-related fatality this year. A separate incident was reported April 1 in Foggy Bottom, near where the incident occurred. D.C. police say the dogs' owners had been warned about the animals' aggressive behavior before the attack and were cited for training violations. [13586636] Police had warned the dog owners earlier this month to stop walking the animals after the animals were found to have been muzzled and tethered in the past, the police department said Thursday. The owners of the dogs were issued two-day citations for allowing the animals to be muzzled and unmuzzled on a public way. Two people were later arrested by police for "criminal trespass" after they allegedly entered a neighbor's yard to get to the dogs' owner, an officer said. One of the suspects was captured on a neighbor's video, saying, "Somebody's getting killed. I'm trying to get this dog." A witness said he saw Stepp tussling with the dogs for a few seconds and was then bitten. A neighbor, Destiny Jones, told NBC Washington that
